

Tip to maximize...

You do not need to be enrolled in a New York Life medical option to contribute to and use the FSA for Health Care.

FSA FOR HEALTH CARE

The Flexible Spending Account (FSA) for Health Care is an account that lets you set aside money to pay for eligible out-of-pocket medical, prescription drug, dental, vision, and hearing care expenses on a pre-tax basis. The expenses can be for you or your dependents, even if they aren't covered by a company-sponsored plan. At the time you enroll, you elect a contribution amount from $130 to $2,700 in 2020.

Use your 2020 FSA for Health Care for eligible out-of-pocket expenses  from January 1, 2020 to March 15, 2021. You must submit all expenses for reimbursement by March 31, 2021. Any unused money in your account after the March 31, 2021 deadline will be forfeited.

New York Life also offers an FSA for Dependent Care to help you pay for expenses, such as child care for children under age 13, or in-home care, or adult day care. Learn more.

NEW for 2020! Access PayFlex through the Aetna app anytime, anywhere.

For medical services, such as an office visit, you should wait until your claim has been processed by Aetna and then appears on the PayFlex site (or when your EOB is available for claims through plans outside of New York Life's medical options), so you know your payment responsibility. Once you know how much you owe, you can use the PayFlex debit card to pay your provider directly. Visit www.payflex.com to verify your claim with just a few clicks.
